- The 6th grade students just completed a project on the expenses that go with buying a car. (Insurance, interest, monthly payments, loans, etc.)

Amanda DeMange

- In the 6th grade, the students are learning about how to construct a formal informative 5 paragraph essay. After reading a variety of samples, and modeling high quality informative essays, the students created their own informative paper over a monument of their choice. For extra tickets and a popcorn sticker, the students could create a model replica of the monument they wrote about. Many of our students took advantage of this opportunity, and they were very proud to bring in their final products to go along with their papers. On February 9, the 4th grade students from Mrs. McMurray's class visited Mrs. DeMange's and Mrs. Greve's room to meet with the 6th grade students. The 6th grade students used this time as a "teaching time" to show off their final papers and products to the 4th grade. They also used this time to point out important elements of their paper such as what a thesis sentence is, how to create topic sentences, how to use higher level transitional words, and how to edit properly. The 4th grade students were also able to show the 6th grade students a paper they are currently working on to receive some pointers from the 6th graders. All of the final products are currently on display in the 6th grade hallway.

Karla Huwer

- Sheriff Jeff Grey spoke to 7th and 8th grade classes about his job and rescuing people; this fits with an argumentative essay unit on rescuing people who make risky choices.

Kim Bruns

- Over the past couple of years, the projects that I do with the JH students has been inspired by a TAB-based approach to learning (Teaching for Artistic Behavior). Most of these TAB-inspired projects are more open-ended and student-centered. These projects allow students to take more creativity and ownership of their own learning. For each lesson, students are first introduced to a new skill and/or practice an existing skill, and then they have the freedom to decide how they will use those skills to create a final project of their choosing. This TAB-based approach has been great as students are able to make art that is personally meaningful and relevant to them. This is what the 6th and 7th Graders are learning about right now.
 - 7th Grade is working with clay. These students have the flexibility to make any clay project of their choosing. To begin this project, students were responsible for developing their own idea and working method. All students sketched out an idea or found an inspiration image online. Then, they had to decide which clay building techniques (slumping, pinch pot, coils, slab, ect) would work best for each part of their project and shared their ideas with me during a planning conference. Once the project was built, students used their choice of paints and glazes to create a surface decoration for the final piece.
 - 6th grade is focusing on realism in art. For the last two class, students experimented with different colored pencil techniques (such as burnishing, directional lines, crosshatching, scumbling, and watercolor wash) and learned how these techniques can be used to describe the surface texture of an object. They will soon be introduced to the grid drawing method and discover how mathematical angles, ratios, and proportions can help them draw more accurately. This unit culminates with student applying what they learned about colored pencils and realism to create a drawing depicting anything of their choosing.
